BASEBALL

The South San Francisco team journeyed to Redwood City last Sunday, and were defeated in an exciting game by a score of 5 to 1. Steele of the locals pitched a great game, allowing only eight scattered hits, but his support was very ragged, the team making five errors behind him. Chase of Redwood was in rare form, holding the local sluggers to three bingles.

Owing to the fact that a number of the players will be way on vacation trips, the South San Francisco team will not play for the balance of this month.

South City Merchants Will Play Tomorrow.

The South City Merchants will play the Glen Park team Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

On account of the majority of the players of the South San Francisco team taking their vacations this month, the South City Merchants will play afternoon games. They will try their best as they have done in the past and keep up South City's record.

The following line-up will be for Sunday's game:

D. Hyland.....Center field
L. Ryan.....Right field
Howard.....Second base
Cordano.....Shortstop
H. Hyland.....Third base
Fourcans.....First base
Guenley.....Pitcher
Carreiro.....Catcher

Admission will be 25 cents. So come and help the home boys out.

Note—Rumor that has been circulating in this city is incorrect, as Joe Kent is still manager. "We are not like Oakland, changing a manager every month. When a team is going good why change a manager?"

C. E. CUMBERSON OWES HIS LIFE TO WIFE'S BRAVERY

C. E. Cumberston, a wealthy San Francisco merchant, owes his life to the heroism of his wife. She grappled with Carl Auerswald, a discharged gardener, who set fire to the buildings on the Cumberston estate near Redwood City early Thursday morning and then attempted to kill Cumberston from ambush. She overpowered him after he had fired four shots at her husband. Three of the shots took effect, but it is believed Cumberston will recover.

Auerswald died from poison he had taken while being conveyed to the Redwood City jail by sheriffs. The gardener is believed to have been insane. In his pockets were found clippings of Frank Holt's attack on J. P. Morgan last week. Revenge for his discharge is also thought to have been a motive.

Cumberston and his wife were awakened by crackling flames at 3 o'clock Thursday morning and rushed half-clad from the house. Auerswald, who was hiding in the shrubbery, opened fire. Mrs. Cumberston seized him when her husband fell and held on until help arrived.

Auerswald and his wife had been employed on the Cumberston estate for about two years. His wife died recently and Auerswald had been brooding over her death.

Before setting fire to the barn, garage and home, Auerswald poured gasoline on the buildings, cut off the water supply and poisoned the livestock about the place. The fire loss is estimated at $30,000.

Cumberston is the head of the C. E. Cumberston & Co. grocery firm, and father of Perry T. Cumberston, vice-president of the William Cluff Grocery Company of San Francisco. Mrs. Cumberston is chairman of the peace committee of the California Federation of Women's Clubs and former president of the Redwood City Woman's Club.

Mr. Cumberston rallied yesterday after a successful operation. Two bullets, which lodged in his left shoulder, were removed and he is reported out of danger.

The Redwood authorities learned yesterday that Auerswald, who committed suicide while being taken to jail after shooting Cumberston, was discharged from the home of Charles Templeton Crocker in Hillsborough after he had chased one of the Chinese with an ax and threatened to kill him. It is also said that he made frequent visits to aliens with rabid anarchistic tendencies who live near Five Points, Redwood City.

Every one of the ten thousand salmon of this coast the people own more than that amount. Think of it, my friends, more than twenty-three times as much money spent for liquor than for Protestant religion! Such stinginess support of the church of Jesus Christ is a disgrace to any community. ## PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

The county board of supervisors met at Redwood City last Tuesday in regular session.

Among the business disposed was the following:

A petition, signed by Harr Wagner and others, taxpayers and residents of the coastside, asking for the board's co-operation in arranging for a special round-trip rate of 95 cents on the Ocean Shore Railroad from San Francisco to Halfmoon Bay for the purpose of transporting tourists to that part of the county, was referred to the P. P. I. E. commission.

Judge E. J. Fitzpatrick addressed the board in behalf of Ray Griffin, an invalid, asking that the latter be granted the use of the rotunda of the courthouse in connection with his work as notary public. The request was granted.

A communication was received from Charles N. Black of the United Railroads in reference to placing tracks at grade where they cross those of the Southern Pacific at Holy Cross Cemetery, and stating that the company was making a last effort to induce the Southern Pacific to permit the United Railroads to substitute the crossing in the vicinity of Leipsic for the crossing at Holy Cross. The communication was filed.

A communication was received from the Southern Pacific Company giving the number of crossings that have been improved by it since last October, and stating that it is arranging to improve crossings of the old county road, now abandoned in favor of the new highway, but which still carries considerable travel, at Baden. The communication was referred to Engineer Neuman.

A communication from the secretary of the anti-annexation committee of Lomita Park, organized to fight annexation to the city of San Bruno, was ordered filed.

PRINTERS OF CALIFORNIA RECEIVE MILLIONS A YEAR IN WAGES

One of the largest industries in the state, paying more than $7,000,000 annually in salaries, is that of printing and publishing, with its allied trades of electrotyping and photo-engraving, according to the report of John P. McLaughlin, commissioner of the bureau of labor statistics.

In 195 establishments in California, which includes only the larger daily papers, magazines and publications, 4519 men are in steady employment. Their exact annual wage, according to the report, is $6,471,929.

As compared with other skilled trades, the weekly wage is higher.

There are 3530 males and 793 females engaged in the business.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG IN "HEARTS IN EXILE"

Presented at Royal Theatre, Sunday, July 11th.

Russian subjects on the motion picture screen are popular with exhibitors and their patrons. Among the nations of the earth, Russia has probably incurred most dislike.

When war was breaking out in Europe, the German Kaiser called his cousin Nicky (the Czar of Russia) an "Asiatic barbarian," which was a polite way of saying that the Russians are uncivilized. And according to reliable evidence, savagery marks governmental methods in Russia, even today. The newspapers constantly print articles on the theme, and the result is the popular mind is on the whole unsympathetic toward Russia and its internal politics.

John Oxenham, among many other authors, has novelized the subject; and the scenario of the World film offering, which is directed by James Young, has been based on the book.

Clara Kimball Young, in the photo drama, plays the part of the girl of high character—sweet, lovable and self-sacrificing. She finds herself the wife of two husbands, to each of whom she has been legitimately married.

Another phase of the drama illustrates the love of two men for a high-souled woman. Police officialdom, cruelties and privations suffered by political and other prisoners who are condemned to exile in Siberia; life in convict stations; Cossack fights and a real wolf chase are vividly illustrated in the picture.

The cast of principals supporting Miss Young includes Montague Love, Claude Flemming, Vernon Steele. The exterior scenes illustrative of Siberian life were made when the snow was on the ground.

The production called for the employment of hundreds of supernumeraries, peasants, soldiers, police officials, and its cost was only limited by the directors' requirements.

"Hearts in Exile" was released on the World film schedule on April 12th. It took a considerable time to produce during the past winter when snow was on the ground and ice on the water, for several scenes were laid in Siberia, and there was a pursuit of a horseman over a frozen river, culminating in the disappearance of the horseman through a vast fissure in the ice.

Charles Chaplin will appear Monday in a two-act comedy, "A Jitney Elopement."

LAST FLIGHTS BY BOY AVIATOR.

Among the farewell flights to be given by "Art" Smith, the boy aviator now appearing at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, will be on Newspaper Men's Day, Saturday, July 24th. The popular young birdman will make two special flights on this day, one at 3 p. m., and a spectacular night flight at 9 p. m.

On the first flight, Smith will feature a burlesque dive from his aeroplane into the San Francisco bay, the diver to be a prominent newspaper man of California. The second exhibition will be one of the most remarkable achievements thus far attempted by the little aviator, and will include, in addition to his comet-like stream of flame and smoke, the writing of the word "Press" in letters of fire across the sky.

At 11 p. m. the newspaper men will entertain "Art" Smith at a farewell reception and dance in the toyland ballroom on the joy zone, when all exposition visitors will be permitted to meet the daring young birdman. During the course of the reception, Smith will be presented with a loving cup as a token of the high regard in which he is held by all the newspaper men who have met him during his long and successful engagement at the exposition.

The special flights on Newspaper Men's Day will be among "Art" Smith's last exhibitions prior to his departure for Fort Wayne, Ind., where he will be the honor guest at a mammoth "home-coming" celebration.

ON A BLACKBOARD

Mildred Parmeter sat in the little parlor beating her feet impatiently on the striped rag carpet. Two neighbors had dropped in to see her aunt, and the three ladies, with their knitting work and occasional report to their black papier-mache snuff-boxes, were discussing the probable fate of a disagreeable farmer in the vicinity, whose theft of "a yearling" was the chief topic of conversation in all the farm houses within a radius of a dozen miles.

Miss Mildred caught up her hat and sauntered out of the front door. Only a few rods away were the pine woods—cool, still and fragrant.

A wagon came rattling along the crooked, sandy road. Her uncle was returning from a trip to the village and, as he drove into the shed, he called out to her:

"Letters, daughter."

It was always his name for her—she was so like a daughter he had lost. She waited for the letters, not very impatiently. There were only two of them. The one from her sister she opened first.

"And Mr. Edson came yesterday," ran one of the paragraphs. "We told him of your fancy to bury yourself all summer in the rural districts, but assured him you would join him for a week, at least, before we returned to New York. Of course, that is the only thing that prevents him leaving the springs at once. By the way, he heard before he came up that it is all over between you and Oscar, who is engaged to that cousin of his, Ella Hunt, who was always held up as a model of all the virtues. I don't doubt but that she is exactly suited to him. Mamma is delighted that Mr. Edson is going to stay with us. You know, Milly, what she has set her heart on, and of course you won't disappoint us all."

Yes, Mildred reflected, she was altogether the proper for Oscar Brant, and with a queer little laugh she thought of the hopeless difference between herself and this most admirable woman. But the laugh was so near akin to a sob that she dared not trust herself to go on thinking. She caught up the other letter, from a young lady sojourning at Saratoga. It was addressed in a large dashing hand, covering the whole envelope. "Why will she use violet ink?" was Mildred's thought as she opened it. It was as dashing inside as out.

"You are certainly a gay deceiver, my dear, my dear. To think that your health required rest and mountain air, so that you could neither give your family nor me the pleasure of your society. I understand it all now, and really I can't blame you. Oscar Brant is more entertaining than a hotel full of people and handsomer than ever. I saw him for just a moment en route for Champlain with his party. Camping out must be such fun. And to think you have an uncle conveniently near. Of course you see Oscar ever day or two."

"More news!" How little her Saratoga friend guessed at the truth in the case. And Oscar Brant was only four miles away. She could not help it now if the tears came. Why could they not let her alone, she thought. She had come up to the New England hills to gain some of the strength and peace she had lost after she and Oscar Brant had parted. She must try for it harder than ever now that the time drew near for her to return to the city.

Her mother and sisters would wait for her at the springs. Mr. Edson would wait, too—Mr. Edson, worth half a million, sixty years old, his head bald and shiny; a short, fat, fussy man, who had "grown a little stouter." Ugh! They would all go home together, to the fall fashions and dinner parties and formal calls.

She went back to the house presently. She would conquer this foolishness, so she told herself, as she had kept saying over and over again the whole summer long. She would conquer her temper, too; grow humble and docile and patient.

Supper was nearly ready when she came in; a beautiful appeal to an artistic eye, with its heap of snowy white biscuits, deep golden butter, and purple grape jelly, but the flowers with which she always decked the table she had forgotten that afternoon. She went at once into the garden, meeting her uncle as he passed by with the foaming milk pails.

"Don't forget my hollyhock, darter," he called out as he passed along. Hollyhocks were a standing joke between them.

When she came again her uncle was carrying on a spasmodic conversation with his wife, who, out of sight in the buttery, was straining the milk.

"An' if they can't find some one to take the school," he was saying, "it'll hev to be shut up a while."

"What school?" Mildred asked, caring less for the answer than for the effect of a great pansy she was setting among the china-asters.

"Here in our own deestrick. Teacher's sick, and they can't seem to find no one to take her place."

"How many scholars are there?" she asked, a sudden impulse taking possession of her.

"Not more'n't twenty, I reckon. It's a summer school, 'tain't very large."

"Uncle, would they let me take it?"

"You, darter!"

"Yes, I believe I should enjoy it and it would do me good, beside giving the teacher a little help. She looks as if she needed help."

So it came about that Mildred Parmeter, meeting the children in the road early next morning, introduced herself to them as the lady who would take care of them till their teacher got well.

It was a queer little log school-house to which they went, one of the primitive sort. From all the windows were magnificent views of the mountains, but Mildred improved even on that advantage by occasionally having recitations out of doors, a departure from the orthodox fashion very gratifying to the youthful mind. She had little contact with the country people, and the peculiar dialect, the homely simplicity of life, and marked characteristics of her pupils continually amused her.

Bobby Whitman, her youngest scholar, had a strong propensity for chewing gum, a habit which seriously interfered with a naturally defective articulation, but one which he sacrificed for the good graces of his teacher.

With Maggie Wetherbee, one of her oldest pupils, she formed almost an intimacy, listening with interest to the long confidences twanged through a very pretty nose, about the trials in tending the baby, picking the "garden sas" and laying down pickles.

Poor Maggie, she learned, was also the victim of an ardent attachment, severely disapproved at home, for "a hand" employed during haying on her father's farm. Between these two extremes in age, she found almost every variety of taste and disposition, realizing that she had entered on a fertile field of usefulness and enjoyment.

She wrote to her sister a very comical account of her experiment, laughing aloud as she pictured the disgust of her lady mother, indulged in the wildest dreams of an independent career, and in a few weeks had become convinced that there was really a great deal in life worth living for.

It was little Harley Jones' turn that week to "rid up" the school-house, as he termed it, and Mildred wondered for two successive days at the cluster of flowers which she found on her desk. The great double geraniums seemed to flash their scarlet glory all over the room; and the hellotrope, too, her favorite flower, in masses of purple beauty, filled the air with its fragrance.

A spray of it, with a few delicate ferns, another of her delights, was laid upon the Bible opened at the chapter with which she began the day's exercise. Harley Jones had certainly a taste and appreciation for which she had never given him credit.

He was vigorously cleaning the blackboard one morning, and she came in just in time to see the last few words as he erased them. The writing struck her peculiarly.

"What did you rub out, Harley?"

she asked, hanging up her hat in the corner.

"Something you writ yesterday, Miss Carpenter. I was writin' it over."

She smiled at the name. He never could get it right, but she corrected the other slips in his speech.

"You mean something, Harley, and you should say I wrote it. Can you remember?"

"He just done it hisself," piped up a voice behind them. "I seen him when I came in."

"Oh, Johnnie Mack!" was the teacher's exclamation, "after I have told you so many times." Yet no possible mutilation of verbs seemed to affect her love for the offenders, or to diminish her patience with them, and in the course of the day she noticed that Harley had really made vast improvements in his copy-book. But she had occasion to reprove Maggie Weatherbee as they walked home together that night.

"I saw you talking with a man this morning, Maggie, when I came across the lot. Is it possible that you meet any one that way outside your father's house?"

"But it wasn't him," stammered Maggie, growing red.

"Him! Who?"

"Why, Bill that I told you about. I didn't expect to meet him," she added, growing redder under the consciousness of how easily the stranger could make her false to Bill. "He's boarding somewhere round, and just asked how soon school would be out. He's drawing a picture of our schoolhouse—and that's all. He had lots of pictures in a big flat book."

A strolling artist, Mildred thought. She knew nothing about artists, but had an idea they were rather inoffensive people. Still she determined to watch Maggie. She must not drift into any danger.

Mildred went earlier to school, the next morning, earlier even than Harley Jones. Fresh flowers were on the desk again, but with a great start she saw the figure of a man at the blackboard writing. "I am here," were the words he was rapidly tracing with the chalk, "and must see you if—"

Just then he turned, conscious of a presence, but not before she had recovered her self-possession.

"Good morning," she said, quietly extending her hand, and, with a smile, glanced from his face to the blackboard.

He caught her hand and held it.

"Mildred, are you ready to forgive me yet?"

She drew her hand away and stepped back. "I have nothing to forgive in you, Oscar. I was angry when I saw you last, but I was the one to blame. Forgive me:"

He looked at her in astonishment; she seemed so utterly unlike herself.

"And have you got over your love as well as your anger, Mildred?"

The quick color flashed all over her face. She looked like herself once more as she answered:

"That question is in poor taste, Oscar Brant. I have not congratulated you on your engagement to your cousin Ella. I do so heartily," she went on, plunging along into a chaos of words lest she should break down utterly; "she is good and gentle and—and everything that I am not. She—" Her voice failed her after all.

"Why, Mildred, what in the world are you talking about?" His arms were around her. She was sobbing on his shoulder. "Where did you hear such a ridiculous story?"

Maggie Wetherbee entered breathlessly, "Miss Parmeter—" then stopped bewildered at the sight before her eyes. Bobby Whitman and Harley Jones had been quarreling. They came up behind Maggie, each eager to exonerate himself. But the wet eyes and flushed face of their teacher made friends of them instantly. "Is it her beau?" whispered Harley, as he nudged Bobby; but Maggie hustled them both out of the room without ceremony, hurrying after herself, and before the teacher recalled them the question appeared to have been satisfactorily arranged.

It was well that the regular teacher could resume her duties the next week, for by that time Mildred was abundantly willing to give them up. Yet she always declared that teaching was the most delightful work in the world, and that she found the happiness of her life on a blackboard.

NEW DISCOVERY ABOUT ANTS.

Scientist Asserts That the Insects Have a Regular Form of Salutation Among Themselves.

Ants have long been known for their excessive industry, but from a curious communication which has just appeared they seem to have surpassed all other insects by organizing an elaborate system of signaling.

Professor Bugnion, who has recently investigated the habits of the white ant, reports that the "soldiers" of that species give warnings or encouraging signals by knocking with their jaws upon dry leaves, thereby emitting a crackling sound. Placing some of these ants on a big plate and covering it with paper, he found that the "soldiers" among the ants responded to his taps with a rustling and crackling sound.

Moreover, apart from this audible signaling, there appears to be some inaudible form of signal, for the professor asserts that the "soldier" ants salute the worker ants.

To do this, "the insect stands firmly on its legs with the head raised and the body slightly oblique, and shakes itself for an instant with a convulsive shudder. This seems to mean something."

MAP OF BERING RIVER COAL FIELD, ALASKA

A new map of the Bering river coal field in Alaska has just been issued by the United States geological survey, which is in some features a departure from previous publications. This map shows the areas underlain by the various grades of coal and the formations underlying and overlying the coal measures and gives also structure sections. The results of the proximate or exact analyses of coal from different parts of the field are printed on the face of the map. All this information is given on a base map which shows the topography of the coal field and of adjacent areas. A small insert map indicates the geographic position of the coal field in Alaska.

The data thus presented have been taken from Bulletin 335, published in 1908. This report contains a complete account of the Bering river coal field, but is now out of stock. The new publication, which is entitled "Map of the Bering River Coal Field, Alaska," can be purchased from the director of the United States geological survey for 15 cents.

Sammy's Wisdom.

It was never a happy day for Sammy's painstaking father when his young hopeful's school report arrived.

As for Sammy himself—well, he was a philosopher.

The awful day had come once more, and father was in the lowest depths of misery.

"Sammy, Sammy," he groaned, "why is it that you are at the bottom of your class again?"

"What does it matter, father, whether I am at the top or the bottom?" queried that wise youth. "They teach the same at both ends, you know."

Birds of Distinction.

The crow and the bird of paradise were talking about fame.

"Why, you are so homely you are only known to the farmers," sneered the proud bird of paradise. "Now, I am so beautiful I have my feathers on the hats of the society women."

The crow laughed sardonically. "That may be, my friend," he chuckled, "but I have my feet under their eyes."

KENOSHA MAN IN TRANCE TWO YEARS

Kenosha's "man of mystery," John S. Kennedy, "died" on the operating table in a Kenosha (Wisconsin) hospital, and from that same table a few minutes later arose Frank Van Wie from a "sleep" lasting two years.

Wednesday morning, May 8, 1913, Van Wie fell from a ladder while working on a building at 1076 Tenth street. He sustained a fractured rib.

After that his mind was a blank; since then he was married and has a child; since then he has twice fallen and sustained injuries, has been beaten into unconsciousness by Chicago thugs and has lived in Milwaukee, Chicago, Janesville, Medford and for the last week as "John Kennedy" in Kenosha.

The operation was comparatively simple once Dr. J. W. Klem had fully convinced himself what the trouble was. An examination showed that the victim of aphasia was suffering from a dislocation of the spinal column, several vertebrae near the base of the skull being out of alignment. This caused a pressure on the spinal column and the result was Van Wie's complete loss of identity.

"That was a tough fall I had this morning, Doc," he said cheerfully. "Wonder I didn't break my neck. You see a cleat broke and the roof was slippery and down I came."

"What date is to-day?" asked the surgeon.

"Why, May 7th, or is it 8th."

"What year?"

"Why, 1913. What's the matter with you?"

Two Years Behind Time.

"Nothing, only you're almost two years behind. This is the year 1915, Kennedy."

"Who are you calling Kennedy? My name's Van Wie—Frank Van Wie!" expostulated the man.

"It ought to be Van Winkle, because you've been doing the same thing as that old gentleman. Did you ever hear of John S. Kennedy?"

"No, I can't recall him."

"Well, ever since you fell and hurt yourself you've been going around the country as John S. Kennedy. Don't you recall any of his movements?"

"I never heard of Kennedy, and I don't remember anything since I fell off the roof this morning. I'm working for the Milwaukee Roofing Company. I'm to be married May 24th to the prettiest little girl in Milwaukee, Clara Heize."

"I tell you your wedding day is past," said the surgeon, who finally convinced the man of his lapse.

Van Wie said that he was to have married Miss Clara Heize, who lived on Thirteenth street, Milwaukee. He had bought the license and the marriage was set for May 24, 1913.

"That disturbs me," said Van Wie. "Does she think I am dead? What of my family?"

On arrival in Milwaukee Dr. Klem told Van Wie he would take him to the home of his father-in-law, 579 Eighteenth avenue. Van Wie protested that he was not married.

His wife's parents almost collapsed when he opened the door and entered the house. They made arrangements and Van Wie will stay with them until he is fully recovered.

Van Wie's wife and his two-year-old son, Francis, are living in Medford, where Van Wie's mother has a farm.

Steel Product.

The United States of America is by far the greatest steel producing country on earth. Germany comes next, with Great Britain third. The figures for 1910 (the latest at hand for the moment) show this country to be equal in steel products to both Germany and the United Kingdom.

U. S. CHIEF JUSTICE DISCUSSES PROBLEM OF FUTURE LIFE

The present chief justice of the United States is not only the foremost expounder of the law and the constitution, as the presiding justice of the United States supreme court, but he is a philosopher and a moralist, as well as a soldier and statesman.

Chief Justice White, in paying tribute recently to the memory and character of the late Justice Lurton of Tennessee, in the services held in open court by the bar association, gave his hearers a dissertation upon one of the eternal problems: "Is death forever and do good works of men perish?"

After reviewing the career of Justice Lurton, and speaking of his passing beyond mortal vision, Chief Justice White said:

Vanishing of Pessimism.

"The unbidden thought which comes as to the fleeting result of all human effort, its perishability and the resulting despondency, is natural from such a loss, and the miasma of pessimism which they produce enveloped me as, with those of my brethren who could do so, we journeyed to Clarksville, Tenn., where he began his active career after the civil war, there to lay him to rest.

"But as I stood by the open grave, surrounded by the kindly faces of so many of the warm-hearted people of Clarksville, who had gathered to pay their tribute of respect and affection, and heard the plaintive melodies of the old hymns telling of Christian faith and hope, pessimism vanished, and I come to feel death is not forever, and good works do not perish, but remain.

"Yes, it was given to me to think, as the waving wheat field in sunshine and in rain conserves its energy in the grain which long after the stem has been cut down and perished, pressed under the millstone, gives forth the nutriment of our material existence, why may we not believe that in the vast reservoir of Divine Providence the energy of our good deeds is conserved, so that they may continue when we have done to aid and bless our country and our countrymen?"

Justice Follows Reason.

"What can better illustrate this truth than the work of the lawyer and the judge, since the role of justice which solves the controversy of to-day becomes the rule of conduct preventing the arising of contention in the years to come? Can we doubt if we listen to the voices of Ulpian and Trebonian calling up through the turmoil and dust of ages to the regions where reason dominates and hence justice prevails? But so distant an example need not be sought.

"Who of us has not known controversies as to powers of government whose complexities and difficulties were so great that their solution threatened the destruction of our constitutional system, either by the disregard of national power or the overthrow of local authority? Insoluble, indeed, they have seemed when from out the past the voice of Marshall spoke and order prevailed, and state and nation continued to move in harmony and majesty in their allotted orbits, to the safety and blessing of our country and mankind."

A Strong Resemblance.

"What a funny looking man that conductor is," said Mrs. Jiggles on the trolley.

"Yes," said Jiggles. "I've been trying to think who he looks like. His face is very familiar to me."

"Oh, I know who it is," said Mrs. Jiggles. "It's our goldfish."

The Longest Sentence.

"It says here that the longest sentence in the English language contains 140 words," said the old fogey.

"That's wrong," replied the grouch. "The longest sentence contains only one word."

"What is that?" asked the old fogey. "Life," replied the grouch.

Success is sweet, the sweeter if long delayed and attained through manifold struggles and defeats.

HOUSES EASILY WIRED FOR ELECTRICITY

Many New Ways devised for Wiring Homes Without Injury to Walls or Ceilings—Provide for Electric Washing Machines, Flatiron, Vacuum Cleaners, Etc., as Well as Electric Light.

In nearly every city or large village, all new houses are wired for electricity when they are built. It is the older homes, those erected before electricity came to be a necessity, which are last to install it. It was thought necessary, a few years ago, to tear out floors, walls and plaster to wire an old house or else have the electric wires always in sight, but this is no longer true. The men who install electric wiring have devised many new and novel ways of running electric light wires beneath the floors and in the ceilings of old houses, without any damage whatever.

In many of the newer western cities an unwired house is a rarity. In Los Angeles, Cal., for instance, an unwired house is almost entirely unknown. Dwellings which let for not more than $15 a month are fully wired, even those which are not yet using electricity have prepared for its introduction. In Detroit, Mich., there are between sixty and seventy thousand dwellings which have been fully wired and prepared for the use of electricity, not only for lights, but for the fullest application of the current to the various household machines and the electric fans. In many other cities, however, there are a great many houses which have not been wired. This refers more particularly to the older houses and is due in a measure to the fact that many of the occupants of these residences believe that to introduce the wires would have the result of marring wall paper, would require the extensive tearing up of carpets, the breaking of ceilings and the working of havoc among the various household idols.

It is just here that the electrical expert has been getting in his best work. The question he has been called upon to solve is "How can electric wires be best introduced into the home, with the least disturbance of existing conditions, without marring beautiful walls, ornamental carvings, or scratching those articles which may have been treasured for generations?" Because of the improvements which have been introduced during recent years in the matter of wiring houses, the terrors to the householder caused by the coming of the electrician have been entirely eliminated.

By an ingenious method the wires are run between the walls of houses and in and out under the floors, which makes the actual cutting of the walls entirely unnecessary. The wires are usually introduced by way of the cellar, but sometimes they come through the attic or from a back porch. Possibly the electrician may take up a floor board at the side of the attic and lower a thin steel tape, called a "snake," by which a clear drop is found. Finally the "snake" reaches the cellar, the helper attaches the electric wires, and by this means they are hauled up. In exactly the same way, other wires are placed in position by being let down the side walls, or under the garret flooring to catch all the little holes made in the plaster where the second floor lights are to be located. Ways have been found by the electrician to introduce their wires between floor beams and floor studs. It seems sometimes as if the builders of old dwellings must have had a premonition that electricity was coming. They certainly have made it easy for the experts to introduce their wires in such a way as not to mar the walls or woodwork and not to require extensive preparatory labor.

In houses where there are hardwood floors, and particularly on the lower floor, the electrician finds more serious difficulties in putting in his wire. But here, too, the "snake" is his efficient tool. It is often introduced by taking up a board in a closet above where the light is to be placed, and thus the trick is easily done. If there is no closet in line with the point to be reached by the electric light outlet, as sometimes happens, or if the floor beams block the way, a section of baseboard is lifted out and the line is run from that point. Thus the electricians steadily progress with their work. They never find an insurmountable obstacle in the work of wiring. No matter how ancient a dwelling may be they can get it ready for electric lights and for the attachment of the various labor saving devices to which reference has just been made. They pull through the wires incased in a protective conduit until the job is done. No holes are made in wall or ceiling which are not covered by some fixture or canopy, or switch plate, every piece of closet which has been taken up is quickly replaced, the little sawdust made is swept up, and the small pieces of plaster which may be knocked out are caught as they fall. The process of wiring makes no noise, the furniture is not disturbed and no material has been brought into the house except a few coils of wire and some paper bags and boxes of porcelain and brass fittings.

The attachments for these various conveniences have been made extremely simple and can be located where the convenience of the householder can best be served.

CONVENTION OF L. O. O. M. IN SAN DIEGO, JULY 19-24

The supreme international convention of the Loyal Order of Moose will be held in San Diego, Cal., from July 19th to 24th, inclusive. This organization, which numbers between seven and eight hundred thousand members in the United States, Canada and Europe, will undoubtedly send to the Pacific coast the largest delegation of any convention held in the west this year.

Many noted men, who are members of the order, will be present and participate in the convention ceremonies. Hon. Thomas Marshall, vice-president of the United States; Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, Governor Hiram Johnson of California, Governor Arthur N. Capper of Kansas, Hon. William Kettner, congressman; Hon. Lyman J. Gage, ex-secretary of the treasury, and many others of equal note will be heard from the rostrum during the convention meetings.

San Diego is particularly well situated, scenically and climatically, for the entertainment of a convention of this kind. Lying as it does beside the beautiful "Harbor of the Sun," within a few miles of snowy mountain ranges, fertile valleys and verdant fields, having a summer temperature that seldom runs above 84 or 85 or below 70, just fourteen miles from the international line that separates Mexico from the United States, and surrounded by bathing beaches, fishing grounds and many interesting and historical points, it has a location that can scarcely be equaled, much less surpassed.

The committee having in charge the affairs of the convention has labored earnestly and carefully to provide amusement for the vast throngs who will attend. Entertainment ranging from "clam bakes" to "bull fights," mountain excursions into old Mexico, band and drill contests upon the grounds of the Panama-California Exposition, organ concerts by artists of international note at the mammoth Spreckels organ, the largest outdoor organ in the world—all these are offered for the delectation of the visitors to the convention. The committee has also arranged with the hotels that there will be no increase in the price of accommodations during the convention. This feature alone will be greatly appreciated by all who attend. There will doubtless be thousands of visitors, apart from members of the lodge and their families, and these will be enabled to enjoy the many features provided for the convention visitors.

A. McSweeney, past dictator of the local lodge, has been selected as a delegate to the convention.

FRATERNAL ORDERS

(By Harry Edwards.)

Arrow Points.

It would be a hard task to estimate the good that men have received through the medium of the various fraternities in the performance of love and charity. Truly, the principles of fraternalism forms a great brotherhood.

Keep the road clear before you, always having in view the true objects of the fraternal principles. No member ever gained a step forward by taking a bypath in order to outstrip his brethren.

Do not try to be "funny" with the candidate awaiting to enter. It is well to caution him to carefully view all that is to be seen and listen attentively to all that is to be heard, and to tell them that although our ceremonies are lively and part dramatic, he will not be harmed. Give him to understand that we are to make of him a brother, and he will be a defender of the order and its principles.

The pessimistic member, the fault-finder and others who are a drawback in the ranks will ever be with us, but probably as providential parts of the work—lighthouses on the shore of failure—to warn those wandering from the right path to seek again the path of duty and service and usefulness to their fellow-men. And thus do thousands of brothers "keep the faith," inspired by the ever-renewed assurance that the consciousness of a duty well performed has a reward which is not only conferred by the approval of the brothers, but by One who has said, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Imp. R. M., 1915 and San Francisco.
(Written by Past Sachem Jos. Robinson.)

There's to be a grand reception, beyond all recollection,
Far greater than the tongue of man can tell.
For by kind fate's direction we're about to link connection
With the world's highway, the Panama canal.
'Twill be the wonder of the ages, and astonish seers and sages;
The Eagle and the Bear will lead the way
And Miss "Frisco" of course as hostess you'll indorse,
As blithe as the bounding ocean spray.

Chorus.
Then shout for San Francisco! The beauty of the West,
The nymph of the Pacific, Nature's child.
As bravely as the billows, she carries Freedom's crest,
By her sweet charms the world will be beguiled.

II.
If you'd like to study Nature, God's true legislature,
Attend the world's great fair. You're welcome all.
There'll be kings, queens and sachems, and leaders of all nations
And every style of dresses, since the fall.
'Twill be the cynosure of nations. The best of man's creations,
The greatest show the world has ever seen.
Great inventors will be there of land, sea and air,
And beauteous San Francisco will be Queen.

Chorus.
—Insignia, 1911.

IF YOU DON'T WATCH OUT.

Have you got a little wife, quite the sunshine of your life,
Who is very wise and witty, and as pretty as can be?
Some jolly little Molly, or some dainty little Polly,
Or, perhaps, her name is Sally; it is all the same to me.
Then, remember this, old chappy: See that she is always happy;
Never vex her, nor perplex her; never let her pout.
For, though you may be a stranger, I will warn you of your danger—
An affinity will get her, if you don't watch out.

Let her dine on roast canary. Never be so mercenary
As to hint that beef and cabbages would quite as well suffice.
Let her wardrobe be extensive; never mind if it's expensive;
Pay the price without a murmur, if she keeps on looking nice.
Down in Newport let her summer—that's the way to be a hummer.
She'll appreciate such kindnesses without a single doubt.
If in keeping with her wishes you should also wash the dishes,
An affinity will get her, if you don't watch out.
Never kick about the cooking; never frown when she is looking;
Never venture to remind her of the pie that mother made.
Always grin while at the table and, as far as you are able,
Make her think it is a privilege to see that bills are paid.
So, if you would keep your treasure, always cater to her pleasure;
Never balk nor out-talk her; never have a wordy bout.
Tho' you may not be outspoken, always sleep with one eye open.
An affinity will get her, if you don't watch out. —Puck.

I. O. F.

(By George W. Hagedorn.)

July will be a busy month for the Independent Order of Foresters, especially for South San Francisco Court Violet.

Court Violet, No. 1453, will hold its large class initiation on July 20th. The different committees report progress in every line. Invitations have been sent out to some of our most distinguished visitors who will be at the exposition.

Supreme Chief Ranger Elliott G. Stevenson of Toronto, Canada, and Assistant Supreme Chief Ranger Frank E. Hand of Los Angeles are among the visitors expected.

Court San Francisco, No. 10, will send its famous drill team and confer the initiatory ceremonies on the candidates. A banquet will be served and a grand time is expected. So get out and hustle, all companions. Companions are expected to bring their applicants in as soon as possible, and show the metal Court Violet is made of. A boost for Court Violet is a boost for Greater South San Francisco.

The high court sessions start July 26th at Oakland. Foresters Day at the P. P. I. E. is the 27th of July, followed by a grand ball given in the California building the evening of the 27th of July.

Tell your friends of an organization that is a non-political and non-sectarian society, welcoming all healthy, good-living men and women within its ranks, without any questions whatever as to their political or

BRIGHT PROSPECTS FOR SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO

South San Francisco, a progressive industrial city, incorporated as a municipality not quite seven years ago, is rapidly taking on the appearance of a city several times its present population. All its principal streets have been improved with modern pavement and sidewalks. The new bay shore highway passes through its business district. Property owners whose frontages have not as yet been ordered up for improvement want it done, and no doubt before another year passes there will be very few if any out-of-date streets in this city.

Before winter comes it is expected that improvements will be made so that more direct connection with Mission road and the state highway will obtain.

The work of raising the Mission road grade between its junction with the state highway at Cypress Lawn Cemetery and Holy Cross Cemetery is now progressing. When brought to proper grade, Mission road to the limits of this city will be rebuilt by the county.

The local board of trustees is perfecting plans to advertise for bids to construct a modern pavement on the new Grand avenue extension from Chestnut avenue to the western limits of this city on Mission road.

Supervisor Casey has assured citizens that the county will build a new road from Mission road to the state highway, as soon as a right of way can be obtained.

It is possible the city will rebuild Mission road from its junction with the new Grand avenue extension to the state highway at Baden.

Another street improvement is being considered by the board, and that is to pave old Grand avenue extension from Chestnut avenue to the Mission road.

It has been suggested that Chestnut avenue (the old auto boulevard), from Grand avenue to the northwestern city limits, be repaired. Then it will be up to the county to continue the repair work from that point to the state highway at Colma.

When all this road work is completed the slogan, "All roads lead to South San Francisco," can be truthfully expressed.

Soon as the city of San Francisco has finished the work of connecting Railroad, San Bruno and Geneva avenues with the bay shore highway, beautiful scenic routes will be opened up from this city to the metropolis.

religious beliefs. An organization that is financially sound and 100 per cent solvent.

This society has succeeded in placing all its policy contracts upon a sound actuarial basis. No extra assessments. Is one of the oldest and most successful of the fraternal beneficial societies and a great paternal and humanitarian organization.

WE'D like to laugh at this sort of chap, but we feel sorry for him. He's bungling over something he ought not to do. He'd save time and fuss and money if he'd call us in to repair the leak properly and quickly. A lot of folks think they can save money by doing just this sort of tinkering. They generally end by coming to us. The moral is, Come at once.

PLUMP! Down goes the meat on the scales. You watch the indicator as it bounces about. Finally it settles at a figure way above what you asked for.

That's weight waywardness. Butcher smiles, inquires if it will do, and you say yes.

All of which is not the way we try to do things in this butcher shop. We endeavor to give exact weight.
